Accessibility Statement

zamanadil.com
Document: ZA-AC-2026-01
Issued: 4 November 2026
Author: Dr. Adil Zaman

Standing: Public notice. Correspondence under it is confidential.

1. Aim

Dr. Adil Zaman intends zamanadil.com to be readable and usable by the widest practical range of readers, including people who use a keyboard, a screen reader, browser zoom, or a phone. The aim is the level described by the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.2 at AA, for the pages this site itself publishes. This statement is not a certificate from an outside auditor.

2. What is provided

Each public page has a skip link to the main content, one main heading, and headings in a logical order. Links, buttons, and form fields show a visible focus style. Form fields are labelled, and links use meaningful text. Images that carry meaning have a text alternative. Body text and navigation are set for readable contrast. Animation follows the system setting for reduced motion.

The contact form can be completed with a keyboard. Errors are written on the page, not only by colour.

3. Reading language

A reading-language control is provided on publications, research reviews, and opinion pages, including the individual record. It is not shown on the other pages of the site. The choice is kept in this browser. Where a live translation is shown, the published text remains available as the text of record.

4. Known limits

A journal, DOI, or PDF opened from a publication record is published by someone else. Its accessibility is outside this site. A live translation can be imperfect, especially for names and technical terms. Some older records may have a short summary rather than a full text.

5. Reporting a barrier

If a page on zamanadil.com blocks you, write through the contact form or to adil.zaman@uog.edu.pk. Please name the page and describe what you were trying to do. The message is read as confidential professional correspondence under the Privacy Notice. A barrier that can be corrected in this site will be corrected within a reasonable time.
